Jones Congratulates the Town of Caledon on MacLean's Magazine Rating

(Queen's Park) – Sylvia Jones (Dufferin-Caledon) rose in the House today to commend the Town of Caledon on being named the safest place to live in Canada for the second year in a row by MacLean's magazine.

"I am very proud to represent a town such as Caledon, which takes pride in its people and its community," said Jones.

The safest place to live designation is based on per capita crime data from the Canadian Centre for Justice Statistics.

Jones took the time to acknowledge the Caledon detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police and volunteers for the Caledon Policing Advisory Council for their efforts in keeping the community safe.

"I would like to offer my congratulations on another great year to Caledon OPP detachment commander Andy Karski and Caledon Mayor Marolyn Morrison," said Jones. "I thank them for all of their hard work to make Caledon a safer place."

"Hundreds of volunteer hours are put in every year by outstanding organizations like Citizens on Patrol, Youth Leadership and Road Watch," said Jones. "A price cannot be placed on your dedication to community safety."

"Finally, I congratulate the residents of Caledon," said Jones. "It is your hard work and pride in your community that brings you the recognition you so deserve in making Caledon a safer community to live, work and raise a family."
